--* EDITORIAL --*

Greetings.

I hope you will find this edition of interest. It is certainly good news to hear of another new Folk Club starting up - this time in Echuca (see p.23), and I wish the organisers the best of good luck for the task ahead. With their news in mind, I could not help but include one of Keith McKenry's poems, it seemed more than mere coincidence when I stumbled across it....

Don't forget that contributions are welcome, so when you attend something 'folky' in nature, consider putting pen to paper about the event. Whilst I realise that the possibility of such contributions appearing from most of you is more appropriately answered by the title of Keith's poem, I do wish you would prove me wrong - I'd love not to be able to say "I told you so".

My heartfelt thanks to Peter Goodyear for stepping in - at very short notice - to produce the most recent two editions. You did a marvellous job Peter, and it is much appreciated.

Enjoy this month's reading.

Kathy

is offering a five week series of Workshops in Voice, from Thursday, April 14th, to 12th of May, 7.30pm till 10.00pm.

The Workshops explore the relationship between body, breathing, and voice, through improvisations, group activities and song- They are open to all who wish to enjoy using their voices - around the campfire, in performance, in the bath... and they are run in the belief that everyone can sing, given encouragement and support in a relaxed atmosphere.

Above all I believe that singing is fun and that you will enjoy the workshops.

Therese Virtue is a founding member of The Melbourne Short Women's Choir, she sings with the Witchwood Trio and has worked extensively with English singer Frankie Armstrong.

There are only 20 places available, so please return the form below with payment promptly. We will use an inner city hall accessible by public transport. Confirmation will be by phone or mail by April 7th.

Oh me name is Meg Davis and I work down at Shearers, Making wagons and stirrups and hames, While the war it is raging and the men are all fighting, We women toil here makinf fuel for the flames, For it's 1915 and the men have all gone, They're battling in Europe so we carry on, We're keeping the candles lit bright here at home, To light their way back to the Murray

Oh m' name it is Mary and I am an orphan, My father was killed in the war, And my Ma was Meg Davis, an upstanding lady, She drowned in the Murray the year I turned four. It was 1916 when the telegram came, The death of a soldier its message proclaimed, And Ma missed her footing due to tears and the rain, And she slipped by the bank of the Murray

Oh me name it is Billy and I am a soldier I just got me orders today. And my love's name is Mary, she's fair as a sunset And I hate to be leaving her lonely this way. But the year's '42, 'tis the Year of the Drum and the guns and the Government call me to come, So past Mallelucca and tall shining gum. I'm drifting away down the Murray.

Oh the year doesn't matter - there's always a drum And the guns and the Governments call men to come But the town still grows strong in her tall shining sons While her daughters light lamps by the Murray

(c) Wendy Joseph

WENDY JOSEPH is 34 and a New Zealander. She spent much of her earlier life in Child Welfare homes and Institutions. She has had no formal musical training, beginning to sing and write after she came to Australia in 19... She would like to write more songs in a light-hearted vein.

Maybe one day....

THE PUDDING

An Irish folk tale with music
By Brian Appleford and Louis McManus.

The Pudding is the first production of the Bally Who? Company, (formed in 1985), and is based on a story by the 19th century Irish writer, William Carleton.

Carleton's stories were intended to expose the dreadful superstitions and living conditions that the Irish peasants lived under, but they have always been read for their portrayal of a people of wit, humour and indomitable spirit.

William Carleton, himself the son of peasant parents, was born in Tyrone in 1794. He was the youngest of 14 children and was educated at one of the illegal 'hedge schools' in the belief that he would be later sent abroad for training as a priest. Carleton did not agree with this proposal and eventually made his way to Dublin.

In Dublin he was employed by 'The Christian Examiner', and it was this newspaper which printed his sketches of Irish peasant life, later published as 'Traits and Stories of the Irish Peasantry' (1883). This was followed, a year later by 'Tales of Ireland'.

Carleton wrote a number of stories and novels but was addicted to drink. He died in poverty in 1869.

MOVING TARGET Margret RoadKnight Sandstock SSM028 Reviewed by GORDON MIGNOT

IN dedicating this album to the memory of Frank Traynor, "the first to suggest linking my folk singing with jazz and blues". Margret gives a fair indication of the record's content.

Unarguably Margret's best record to date, she is in confident voice throughout, rocking on Hot. City, cool on Samba de Orfeu and relaxed on Footloose.

The four accompanying musicians provide a solid musical base. Phil Manning contributes some tasty guitar work and David Bentley on keyboards provides tremendous contributions throughout. Do these ears detect some New Orleans nuances at times in his playing? Not content with this fine piano work, David also features as songwriter of two of the best tracks -Hot City, about the joys, or supposed joys, of living in the Deep North (?!) and Black and White. He also contributes the words of two other songs.

Mention must be made of the version here of the Robyn Archer composition. Sweet Solitary Blues. Robyn's original version was more reflective; Margret's version is grittier, this electric interpretation reinforcing what a superb song it is. Hands up those silly people who say that cover versions do not work?

Is there anything about the album the reviewer does not like? Well, since you mention it, indifference to this version of Can't Stand the Slaughter. I might endorse the sentiments of the song but even after many listenings to the album I do not feel Margaret and the musicians have sufficient "chops" the necessary funk. Granted it is a proficient version, but somehow mechanical, and does not have the sureness of the remainder of the record. However let's keep things in perspective and not quibble greatly about one track.

To summarise - a gem of a record.

The record shop owners/managers will probably be wondering where to place the record - whether in the "folk" section, or under "blues/jazz" or "female vocal". Wherever it is placed, seek it out. You will be pleased that you did.

SOUTHERN CROSSINGS Michael Atherton and friends Sandstock, SSM026

THE record shops will probably have a similar problem with this album. Do not be surprised to find it perhaps filed under "folk" or "new age/ambient" or in the clasical section. It is music often to be heard in concert halls.

Southern Crossings comprises Michael Atherton, Michael Askill, John Napier - formerly known as the Atherton Tableband. The three between them play a bewildering range of instruments, virtually a music A to Z from Aboriginal music stocks through to zamponas (Pan pipes) and zither. Also, the musical influences are drawn from various countries and traditions and different centuries.

Yes, it could be said that there is an element of "new age" or "ambient" music, but this record has a warmth sometimes lacking in this musical genre. Superb musicianship is the order of the GORDON MIGNOT

AND PIGS MIGHT FLY

by Keith McKenry

Liberated them there carp
And set our hearts a'quiver,
For when the floods went down those carp
Had colonised the river.

You hear tales, of the fishing,
'Round Echuca, long ago,
How a day's catch was a dozen cod
Off a line hung from your toe;

How the Murray River used to flow Untrammelled to the sea And nurture fish, and fisher folk, In loving harmony;

How Time itself would go fishing, And linger around for days Beside a billabong or pool, Beneath the summer haze;

How the King of the river was the cod (And fisher folk, they say, Mould dream of catching such a one As ever got away).

But times have changed, the world's gone wrong, Its practices are sharp, And they measure catches now, my friend, By the metric tonne — of carp!

Some blokes they tell as how the carp
Mas introduced to dams
And there confined, till 'fifty-six,
When the floods which drowned the land

Now as you wander up and down
You'll see the corpses rank
Of carp, fished out, and in disgust
Tossed backwards up the bank.

Whereon they rot, in massive piles
- And grant one local wish,
For there they form one great unholy
Levee bank - of fish!

Now, if Time had lingered more, And the levee was there first, There wouldn't be no bloody carp Cos the bank it wouldn't burst!

Which isn't stupid as it sounds Cos down Echuca way They're pretty much behind the times And they're waiting for the day (Maybe next week, maybe next year If they just let things be) Those carp will go and disappear And leave the river free.

Yes, the fareers down Echuca way Their hopes are riding high, For cod upon the fishing line - And pigs up in the sky.

'TALL STORIES' - NO NOT REALLY !

From February's 'Australian Folklore Society Journal' comes the following snippet: "Forget the tall stories and the re-hashed gags — the real Australian Yarn is the truth told as fiction."

But, will I like 'Dingle Spike'??

Well, take a look at the following and make up your own mind....

- * In 1982 they won the 'British Pub Band of the Year' award.
- * In 1984 they represented Ireland at the Festival of Peace Songs in East Germany.
- * In 1986 and 1987 they appeared at the prestigious Milwaukee Irish Festival and the Chicago Festival, followed by a tour of major centres on the east coast of the U.S.A.
- * In 1987 they represented Ireland in Malaysia's St. Patrick's Day Festival.
- * The band regularly tour England, Ireland and Wales as well as making appearances on BBC Radio and Television and RTE Television in Ireland.
- * To date they have recorded two albums and are currently recording their third. A new single 'The Bold Fenian Men' is now on release. Two previous singles chart in England. A cassette of 'Dingle Spike' tunes is now on release in the U.S.A.

James Nally from London, England (of Irish parents from Co.Mayo). Keyboards, whistles, accordian (All Ireland champion), bodhran and vocals.

Jack McCarthy from Ballinskelligs, Co.Kerry, Ireland.

Manager, Acoustic Guitar and Lead Vocal.

Timmy O'Brien from Keel, Castlemaine, Co.Kerry, Ireland.

Bass Guitar, vocals and band comedian.

Tom McManamon from London, England (of Irish parents from Co.Mayo). Banjo (All Ireland champion), mandolin.

Following their 1987 Malaysian tour, the band members spent a few weeks on holiday in Australia and were impressed with the standard and popularity of Irish Folk Music both in Melbourne and in Sydney. Unfortunately time did not allow them to see much else of Australia, so this time they're doing it properly.

'Dingle Spike' are now about to embark on their first Australia-wide tour, and within the space of a mere 24 days will be appearing at various locations in N.S.W., Q'ld., Vic., Tas., S.A., N.T., W.A., and the A.C.T. (It seems they can't have seen a scale map of Australia yet!).

Concert-goers are in for a special treat as Melbourne's own Maria Ford will be special guest singer at the concerts. Without meaning to start a dreaded 'comparisons war', Maria is regarded by most people who have heard her as our local rival to Mary Black, and indeed offers beautiful renditions of many songs for which the latter singer is renowned.

All in all we can look forward to a series of exciting concerts.

Welcome back 'Dingle Spike' !

A SOBER MAN'S VIEW OF NUMERELLA

[The following review was written by Jonathan Mitchell] [and has been reprinted, with thanks, from N.S.W.'s] ['Cornstalk Gazette', March 1988 edition.

The 14th Numerella Folk Festival certainly catered for a huge variety of tastes this year and went down in the books of those lucky people present as one of the best festivals held - anywhere.

Whether your preference was for an instrumental session or an all-night singing session, hot dry weather or a hailstorm, a good dance or a game of transvestite road bowls, this year's Numerella was right up your street.

I'd not arrived on the Friday night before, but there was a large enough contingent from nearby Canberra to make up a reasonable session, the seemingly inexhaustible Peter Logue doing a lot of the leading.

Saturday, as expected, saw the majority of the folkies arrive and an interesting session in Andrew Cole's caravan during which Donald (from Wagga) demonstrated an amazing propensity for onthe-spot songwriting - in three languages too!

One of the most spectacular storms I've experienced in this country struck during the afternoon and sent people scurrying from sodden tents to the shelter of the hall where an instrumental session led by Dave Alleway and a grand woodwind player from Canberra called Ian was in progress.

The dance on the Saturday night was unusually comfortable, the virtual absence of Sydneysiders making it less of a squeeze than normal. Canberra Morris (and guests) provided additional entertainment and there was a sporadic session in the bar which increased in quantity, if not quality, at the end of the dance.

Despite inclement weather there were three sessions in the campsite after the dance, with the likes of Logie, Fritz, Fitton, Roshane, Jim Bee, Melanie and Chris McGinty venting forth - or fifth?

Lazing by the river, viewing prospective partners for that evening's dance was the norm for Sunday, the highlight of which was the usual marathon concert with excellent spots by Mick O'Leary, the gruff but sensitive Chris McGinty, Keith McKenry, Wingnut, Andrew ("the old") Cole and Ulrich O'Boyle, an exmember of the Snowy Mountain Settlers. I particularly liked a version of 'The World Turned Upside Down' sung in close harmony by three young people from Canberra; also the band which ended the concert and left people who had sat for five hours clamouring for more. So numerous were the performers that the organisers tried to limit the tail-enders to two items, although this was ignored by one lady from New York who insisted on singing three songs of varying mediocrity.

Another good dance was followed by a session which lasted through near-freezing temperatures until the first currawong warbled over the Numerella Flats, ringleaders being Eddie Scott, Mike Jackson, Scrumpy, John Quiggin, Dave Alleway, Jeanette Gillespie, Martin Hungerford and others from Canberra who amazed us with their parodies.

Numerella was treated to quite a spectacle on Monday when a team of "ladies" challenged the men to a game of road bowls. The "ladies" turned out to be Eddie Scott, Fritz, Gooch, Lachy, Chris ("the young") Cole et al, in borrowed attire. The resulting game will be talked about for many a year, particularly by the busload of Chinese tourists who arrived just in time to see Fritz, in a body stocking, whipping Eddie with a length of hose! There was to be a return match between the folkies and the locals next day, but Fritz and I sadly had to take our leave.

/--/--/ LONGFORD REBORN /--/--/

[The following review was written by Robin Connaughton] [and has been reprinted, with thanks, from N.S.W.'s] ['Cornstalk Gazette', March 1988 edition.

After a gap between today and the old "international" festivals, Longford was reborn over the Australia Day long weekend this year as a "regional" folk festival.

The format involved the football club, the camping ground near the river, the Bottom Pub (they wouldn't dare call it that in Sydney) and indoor and outdoor concert venues.

The concerts were good, the workshops were good, the dances were good (though the football club hall could have been bigger). But the main thing was that a generally pleasant mood seemed to settle over everyone. The usual occasional problems with venues, timing and the like seemed to cause no paranoia. People came to enjoy themselves and did.

Artists coming from the mainland were Danny Spooner, Kate Delaney and Gordon McIntyre, Rab Mitchell, Seamus Gill and myself. However the Tasmanian artists performing at the concerts were of such a standard that all concerts were uniformly good.

Folk is alive and well in Tasmania and while it was great to see Mick Flanagan and Brian Mooney again (yes, I was singing in the 60s and 70s), it was good to see a whole range of singers I'm ashamed to say I didn't know of, including some younger ones - a pattern we could hope to see in Sydney.

I know it costs a bit more to get to Tassie, but if you do it you'll enjoy it greatly. Try it next year.

[Following is a letter which has been reprinted, with thanks,] [from N.S.W.'s 'Cornstalk Gazette', February 1988 edition.]

1617 West 10th, Austin, Texas, USA 78703

Dear Folks,

I am interested in visiting Australia and playing in folk clubs, festivals, etc. I play traditional and contemporary music on fiddle, butter accordion, banjo and mbira and sing.

I am interested in Australian folk music since I hear the button accordion is used, but I am unfamiliar with traditional Australian music so would be interested in corresponding with other musicians from "down under". I play music from the southern Appalachians, Texas and the south-western US, French and Irish music and African mbira. Is there any Aboriginal music or any cross-cultural styles down there?

RIVER FOLK ECHUCA

TI ANNESLEY ST.

ECHUCA 3564

VIC

(054) 825740

Sunday 20th March 188.

Hi everyone,

As you can see by the letterhead above, we have started a Folk Club in Echuca, and wanted to let as many folkies as possible know of our new venture.

Basically, the aim of 'River Folk Echuca' is to provide regular and varied live music to the town, in a relaxed and informal atmosphere. Our venue is the Pastoral Hotel in Sturt Street, and it seats at least 100 in the lounge area.

We are holding monthly performances, inviting guests from out of town as well as encouraging as much local talent as possible. We started at the end of 1987 with Rick E. Vengeance, supported by fiddler Michael Losin and two local performers. In January, 'Open Road' from Castlemaine were supported by two Melbourne buskers, and in February, Ian Paulin performed, backed by local artist Peter Gibson.

Martyn-Wyndham Read and Danny Spooner are including us in their country tour in March, and we expect to have John Beavis from Bendigo over at some stage this year, as well as Brent Parlane.

To date, we have a membership of fifteen and a good deal of support from the local community to enable the Folk Club to succeed for some time. We also have badges, with our logo on them, for distribution to members and to performers, to try and make ourselves known a bit more.

Door charges will be kept as near to $5.00 as possible ($3 concession/members).

Anyway, that's "us" - hopefully we'll be around for a while longer and people down there in the "big smoke" might even come up to one of our folk nights!

Hope to see you all in Echuca some time soon.

Regards.

Lisa Vinnicombe & Heather Grills.
